

Bill Beaumont OBE

Perhaps the best-known & most popular rugby player of recent years - playing for England 34 times between 1975 & 1982 when injury brought his career to a premature halt.

For 21 of those games Bill was an inspirational Captain & English fans of the right age will never forget the great climax in March 1980 when England beat Scotland to secure the Grand Slam, following the memorable thrashing of Wales at Twickenham, England 9 - Wales 8!!! (The Erica Rowe intervention will also be a fond memory for some sad fans!!)

Little did the Fylde sixth team in 1970 realise what heights their new fullback would reach, 7 Lions caps, 3 in New Zealand 1977, and 4 as Captain in South Africa 1980.

Bill was heavily involved at Twickenham in the development of the game & is of course a veteran of A Question of Sport.

An experienced & popular speaker for all occasions.
