

PAUL FLETCHER

Over the past decade Paul Fletcher has become one of the most sought after Speakers in the country, his special brand of sporting anecdotes, tasteful humour and corporate message delivers every time.

In 1970 Paul joined Burnley football as one the game's most expensive players and earned his keep over the next 10 years making over 400 appearances for the club. Just before being called up to play for the England squad Paul suffered a serious knee injury which coupled with a second injury a year later put paid to his footballing career.

Following his unexpected early exit from professional football Paul joined the rare breed of ex pro players to successfully make the transition from 'team sheet' to 'balance sheet' becoming one of Europe's leading Stadium experts. After being Chief Executive at the Alfred McAlpine (now Galpharm) Stadium in Huddersfield and the Reebok Stadium in Bolton, Paul was invited by the FA to become Commercial Director for the new £500 million Wembley National Stadium.

Paul lives with his wife and family in the Rosendale valley in the heart of Lancashire and is still an active member of the George Formby Appreciation Society!
